Register.

Make sure you are registered in time to vote.

Each state has its own voter registration deadlines, except for North Dakota, the only state that does not require voter registration.

Find your state's registration deadlines:
www.vote.org/voter-registration-deadlines/

Almost half of states allow same-day voter registration, either during early voting or on Election Day.

Check out the full list of what each state allows:

Service members voting absentee can use the Federal Post Card Application to register.

Military spouses and other family members may be eligible for the same absentee voting rights afforded to active service members.

Research.

Know the issues and candidates on a ballot before casting your vote.

Research candidates and policies so that you can make informed voting decisions.

Tip: Most states do not allow phones in the voting booth. Consider writing down your choices on paper so you can remember who and what you want to vote for.

Plan.

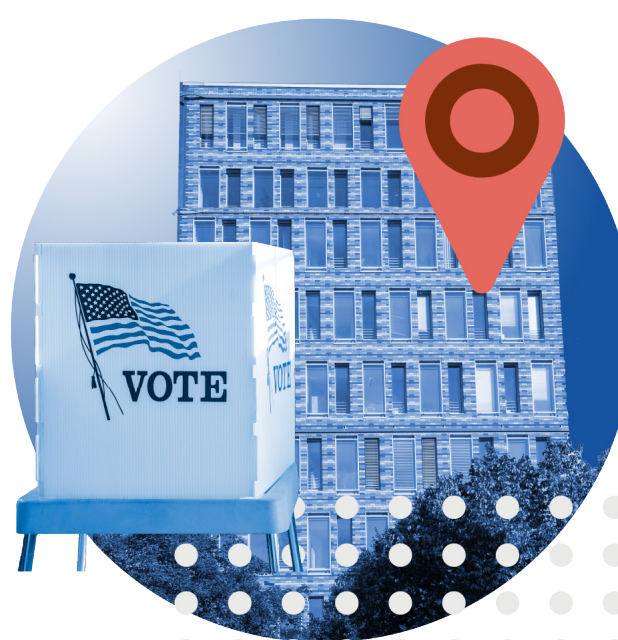

If you plan to vote in-person on election day,

Locate your polling station and know the hours so you don't miss your chance to vote. Consider going early to avoid potential long wait times.

Find your polling station:

Can't be there on election day?

Consider voting early, voting absentee or mailing in your ballot. Be sure to research your state's guidelines and deadlines for each option.

Vote.

Did you know that about a third of eligible U.S. voters did not vote in the 2020 Presidential Election?*
